INAUGURATING AN AIRPLANE TAXI SERVICE

San Francisco Is First in This New Field of Transportation

The Checker Taxicab Company of San Francisco announces that this month it will inaugurate the first airplane taxi service in North America. From now on any resident of San Francisco or vicinity "will be able to call 'Graystone 400' and be on his or her aerial journey to any point in California in 10 minutes."

The service promises to begin with nine airplanes. The landing field, sixteen miles out of the city, will be reached by auto service. From there Sacramento will be only one hour away, and Los Angeles four hours. A San Francisco business man, enjoying this service, will be able to breakfast at home, lunch in Hollywood, and attend the theatre on the same evening in his home town.

Each plane will carry two passengers, a pilot, and hand baggage. With two passengers flying for the same destination, the rate per mile fixed in the prospectus of the company is twenty cents each, or five cents lower than the California rate for long distance taxicab service.

A special bid will be made for tourist patronage. Walter T. Varney, head of the taxi-plane service, says that in two days of flying over California the tourists will see more of the State than he could otherwise in 30 days. "In one hour we will be able to show the visitor everything to be seen in the San Francisco Bay area and in three hours we will be able to transport him over the heart of interior California and to Yosemite and back."

The aerial cab service is to be run by a company capitalized at $500,000, which represents a consolidation of the Walter T. Varney airplane school and the Checker Taxicab interests. All the Courtesy is a new word for old time politeness. It is born of a desire to serve. When naturally expressed, it enables one to make friends and to win customers.

Courtesy is more than mere politeness—it manifests a sympathetic interest in the welfare of others. It implies that rare gift of being able to take the other person's point of view of being able to think as the customer thinks, of being able to appreciate her wants and her needs as she appreciates them. Viewed in this way, courtesy is simply and daily practice of the Golden Rule.

True courtesy abhors ostentatiousness. It is sympathetic, unselfish, sincere. It is one of those priceless refinements that differentiates the kind and considerate person from one who is unkind and inconsiderate. It cannot be purchased, but one may cultivate and enrich it by having scrupulous regard for the finer feelings and interests of others.

WEST POINT, N. Y.—Dr. Emmet J. Scott and Ferdinand Q. Morton Civil Service commissioner, were the chief speakers at the 18th anniversary of the U. S. military detachment Monday.

The detachment consists of 220 enlisted men taken originally from the 9th and 10th Cavalry. There are now three Colored units here, the Cavalry detachment, medical and veterinary detachment.

OPPORTUNITY

So long as men shall be on earth
There will be tasks for them to do,
Some way for them to show their works:
Each day shall bring its problems new.
And men shall dream of mightier deeds
Than ever have been done before;
There always shall be human needs
For men to work and struggle for.

WHY DIAMONDS REMAIN SCARCITY

It is Because Their Production Is Severely Restricted

The world's diamond industry is approaching a crisis. At the recent annual meeting of the De Beers Consolidated Mines, held in Johannesburg, South Africa, the chairman of this company expressed the fear that unless immediate steps are taken by all diamond-producing countries to limit their output, the market will be over-supplied and the world will witness the vulgarization of this gem.

The diamond industry is unique in that a limited production and controlled market are advantageous alike to the buyer and the seller. A restricted output as the New York Sun explains, "not only does not hurt but may actually benefit the purchaser. As diamonds are hardly a necessity, no one is put to any real discomfort by a restriction on the quantity produced. Nor does the fact that the price of diamonds is raised hurt owners and buyers as a whole. Diamonds are desired because they are beautiful; they are also desired because their possession brings, or is thought to bring, a certain amount of social prestige to their owner. The prestige depends upon their expense, and if their prices were halved, each purchaser would simply have to buy twice as many to achieve the same effect."

The greatest diamond fields are in South Africa. Just as their expanding output was beginning to saturate the demand in 1913 and 1914, the World War arrived to relieve the situation by creating a market among profiteers and munition workers who for the first time found themselves able to indulge in the extravagance of jewelry. The close of the War not only brought collapse to inflated industrial profits, but also flooded the world with the gems of the Russian aristocracy and the "new poor" elsewhere. To save their industry from indefinite depression, the "Big Four" producers of South Africa—the De Beers Consolidated, the Jagersfontein, the Premier and the South West African interests—agreed to limit their output on a quota basis sufficiently to maintain the market price. And the result of this self-discipline has been that diamonds today are selling as high as at any time in the past.

The trouble arises from the fact that outside producers are profiting from the Big Four restriction at the latter's expense. The diamond fields of Portuguese West Africa, the Congo, British Guiana and Brazil, besides the workings of some 7,000 individual diggers in South Africa itself, are turning out all the

HAMPTON-TUSKEGEE IN BIG PAGEANT

(By Dick Thomas)

NEW YORK — A pageant depicting the progress of the Colored people of America was given last Monday at the Carnegie Hall under the auspices of the Hampton-Tuskegee Endowment Fund. The tableaux depicting scenes of Negro life was one of the most striking parts of the program.

Dr. Nathaniel Dett, the great composer and pianist, featured his own compositions. The Hampton chorus of thirty voices interpreted the songs and spirituals of the Negro. Their voices told of all his hardships, travels and a yearning for a better land than this in slave days.

The Fisk Quartette, already well-known in New York through their radio concerts, held those assembled spell-bound. A full minute elapsed before the applause began.

Dr. Robert R. Moton, successor to the late Booker T. Washington delivered the address. It covered the achievements of the two schools. He was cheered to an echo.

gems they can. At one time the demand fell so low that in order to maintain prices the Big Four had to shut down completely, leaving the field to their rivals. Their patience is approaching exhaustion threatening to cease "immolating themselves" for the benefit of competitors, the South African companies are now demanding a world conference of diamond producers with the object of limiting the world output and assigning quotas to the various fields. The Diamond Syndicate of London would serve as clearing-house for the world product.

BOND AVENUE "Y" vs C. R. T.

The fast Bond Avenue "Y" Basket Ball Team of East St. Louis will be the opponents of the C. R. T.'s on Saturday night, April 4th. This game will be the preliminary to the big volley ball game with Louisville.

The Bond Ave. team is composed of some of the Lincoln High famous "Jumping Jacks" and the report has reached us that they have a fast group of boys and will be hard to stop. We hope this advance information is true for it will take just such a team to entertain our High School boys. It will be remembered that the C. R. T.'s defeated Sumner in the last match game played in our gym and in that game they proved to be strong contenders with the K. R. T.'s for the city championship. This game will start at 7:30 and the admission to it and the volley ball classic is only 25 cents.

LOUISVILLE HERE TONIGHT

The Louisville Volley Ball Team and a company of roomers are in town and we are mighty glad to have such distinguished guests. We are quite sure they have distinguished themselves in many lines of endeavor but we refer now to their prowess on the volley ball court. The big game is tonight, the far will fly tonight and the best team will win tonight.

Pine Street thinks and boasts in having the best volley ball team in the middle west. We need the support of all St. Louis to help us maintain this leadership and the best way you can help is by coming out tonight and rooting for our boys. The game will start promptly at 8:30, Saturday April 4th and the admission is only 25 cents.

LOCKER ROOM SCANDAL

The Superiors with only two players present defeated the Leaders in their League game last Saturday.

Who were on that five man team that let two men beat them? Ask Key.

Come on Mote! Come on Mote!! Dr. White yelled like his life depended on that game.

Capt. Moten's Pathfinders had to play their best to down the haughty Invincibles.

Dixon is gradually getting to be the most foxy player in the class.

What was the matter with Ramsey last Saturday? He was last seen playing Cody singles at 3:00 p. m. Friday.

What did Rev. Abbott do when he got tired?

Indianapolis plays Chicago at Chicago on April 17th. They are sharpening their swords for St. Louis.

Howard Lindsay writes that it is hard for him to get a sweat up in the volley ball games in Chicago.

The big game with Louisville is tonight and Capt. Hancock is depending on all players to be out in uniform.

The banquet for our Louisville guest will immediately follow the game. This affair is being given by the Noonday V. B. Class and all are expected to be present with their company.

POCKET BILLIARD TOURNAMENT TO END WEDNESDAY, 5TH

Spirit is running high and the games are growing more scientific as the end of the Tournament draws nigh.

The men are asked to rally day by day as we to play the 12 games before Wednesday the 5th.

The following prizes will be awarded at the Luncheon on the evening of the 5th: Cue Stick, Membership in the "Y" and a "Y" pin.

COMING

It's the future that inspires us, and always looking and seeking after something is a natural tendency of the human mind. Thus, when we see—COMING! we brace up with hope and set out to seek just what is to appear. Now! Our Caution is: COMING! and you immediately ask—what? April 30, May 1st and 2d.
